Type of this research study is quantitative in nature. Primary source of data information is used for data collection. Primary source of information include questionnaire technique. Data analyzing and data process is used through SPSS software. The key operational functional activities of SPSS is to practically apply demographic information about users, correlational analysis and multiple regression analysis model to know the current value and worth of variables in this study. The limit of sample size is not more than 377 respondents and using simple random sampling techniques. It is observed that in order to extract the outcome the analysis must be carried out so that the better outcome can be extracted.
