Abstract

This research is all about content marketing (Independent Variable) and its impact on brand awareness (Dependent Variable) and customer loyalty (Dependent Variable) and how it can be favorable for telecommunication companies in Pakistan. Content is the new way of doing marketing through social media and other platforms. The study is based on finding the impact and relationship of content marketing on the dependent variables. The sample size that was used for this research is 246, and to collect the data from 246 respondents the questionnaire created on google form and circulated through social medium to get most out of it. Then these responses were analyzed by using SPSS and some tests applied. According to the reliability test analysis the questionnaire used for the research is highly reliable, the threshold values is set to be more than 0.7 and the values are way above than this. The next test applied was correlation, researchers apply this to test the relationship between the variables that there is a significant impact or not. As per the results, there is a positive correlation between the variables. The next test applied was multivariate analysis because the research has two dependent variables that is why regression analysis cannot be applied and the one-way multivariate test applied and it shows the significant impact of independent variable on dependent variables. The recommendations that the researchers can get from this research to further research on this topic is to break the content marketing into more specific variables to evaluate the impact of the variables closely and use different platforms like web to go into different domain of research and analyze the impact of content to move the traffic to their websites. This research also discusses the quality of the content and avoid the quantity of the content.
